

It's a Bird, it's a Plane....

We're really new at this so we're not calling this piece anything specific, just yet. This is a newsletter, a bulletin, a mini-mag, a call-it -what -you-will, which we hope to bring to you at regular intervals. The motive is simple—to share lighter moments at work, to get collectively enthused about new projects, to celebrate joyful life events and if nothing, routinely have something cheerful to read, which (ahem) doesn't have a rigid color palette! Hope you like it!

A grand success

The Avalon-OC&C Business Summit marked a red letter day (and blue letter day) for Avalon, with the event receiving a phenomenal response from India Inc.

The morning sessions had senior OC&C partners from Europe and Brazil along with our very own Avalon partners engage with a select industry audience, to share global perspectives on Supply Chain Management, EPC and Home Improvement.

The panel discussion in the evening saw a lively exchange on succeeding amidst volatility in our business environment Cheers to more such successful events!

Storks Visit!

Nathaline is a granny! Her daughter was blessed with a beautiful boy on 15th August.

Heartiest congratulations also to Ankur and Shuchi for welcoming their bonny baby boy on October 20th.

Our best wishes to the happy parents and grandparents.

Diwali Blast

November has begun on a rather celebratory note, with Diwali festivities lighting up the mood across offices. Casa Avalonites had a rather packed schedule—a mid-day feast, a Housie party, some indulgent sweet-snacking and daredevils that they are—some old fashioned pyromancy (don't be fooled by the photo, there were some ear-splitting explosions too, we hear).

At Chennai, the mood was somewhat somber—the three folks in office on Diwali eve spent a considerable part of the day sorely missing their team-mates hard at work in Riyadh.

Reports from Delhi suggested strict adherence to the traditional dress code and some very diligent downing of golgappas. The highlights of the day included diiwali lights, rangolis, festoons, Diwali gifts, golgappas...did we mention golgappas?

And the Bangalore office...well...err....hmm... also had fun (reportedly) Watch this space for more such interesting times at Avalon.
